About Dr. C.V. Raman

“It is generally believed that it is the students who derive benefits by working under the guidance of a professor. In reality, the professor benefits equally by his association with gifted students working under him.”

– Dr. Chandrasekhara Venkata Raman

Chandrasekhara Venkata Raman was born in Tiruchirappalli, in Southern India on November 7th, 1888. His father was a lecturer in mathematics and physics which kept him immersed in an academic atmosphere. He entered the Presidency College, Madras, in 1902, and in 1904, qualified his B.A. examination, winning the first place and the gold medal in physics. In 1907, he got his M.A. degree, with the highest distinction. His earliest researches in optics and acoustics, the two fields of investigation to which he had dedicated his entire career, were carried out while he was a student. Since back then, a scientific career did not appear as a viable option, Raman joined the Indian Finance Department in 1907. Though the duties of his office took most of his time, Raman found opportunities for carrying experimental research in the laboratory of the Indian Association for the Cultivation of Science in Calcutta (of which he became Honorary Secretary in 1919). Some of Raman's early memoirs appeared as bulletins of the Indian Association for the Cultivation of Science (Bull. 6 and 11, dealing with the 'Maintenance of Vibrations'; Bull. 15, 1918, dealing with the theory of the musical instruments of the violin family). He contributed an article on the theory of musical instruments in the 8th Volume of the Handbuch der Physik, 1928. In 1922, he published his work on the 'Molecular Diffraction of Light', the first of a series of investigations with his collaborators which ultimately led to his discovery on 28th of February, 1928, of the Raman effect which bears his name ('A new radiation', Indian J. Phys., 2 (1928) 387) and earned him the 1930 Nobel Prize in Physics. Raman has been honoured with a large number of honorary doctorates and memberships of scientific societies. He was elected as a Fellow of the Royal Society early in his career (1924) and was knighted in 1929. Prof. Raman died in 1970.
