Master of Social Work (MSW)

In the MSW programme our main philosophy lies in the firm belief that each individual has worth and the right to dignified endeavours which enable them to develop their potential to its maximum extent. Keeping in line with this belief, we aim to help our students develop a positive and committed attitude towards the disadvantaged sections of the society. Touching a wide breadth of academic genres, each course in this department is designed to develop professionals that believe in human morals and values, respect for every member of the society and the knowledge along with the on-field experience required for not only societal but professional growth and development also.

This course provides a conceptual framework to assist the learner in integrating various methods of practice and helps to view the situation and holistically plan a process for change. The Social Work department aims to enhance employment efficiency, mental ability, multidimensional life management potentiality and social justice in the students. The programme of MSW aims to activate the social and cultural bond between male and female students. We motivate the strengthening of relationships between society and man.

(b). Raman Lok Kala Mahotsav

CVRU, Chhattisgarh celebrated a three-day festival to remember and promote Chhattisgarh's various folk art: song, dance, drama, stories, food, even lifestyle. It seemed as if Chhattisgarh's whole culture, in its totality, was presented to the students in all its life over the three days. Padma Vibhushan Teejan Bai performed in the traditional pandavani, which is a folk singing style, telling tales from the Mahabharata.

Raman Lok Kala Mahotsav

Teejan Bai was honoured by AISECT founder and chairman Santosh Choubey for her folk contributions. From Mumbai, the band Kabir Café, led by Neeraj Arya, sang Sant Kabir's couplets set to Western instrumentation. Then a folk group from Lormi, Bilaspur performed bamboo songs, which further mesmerized the young crowd of thousands.

Raman Lok Kala Mahotsav

Mr. Choubey, in a speech, expressed how important folk art was along with science. Chief guest Shailesh Pandey, storyteller and publisher Mukesh Verma and poet and writer Balram Gumasta, among others, struck a similar note: the youth must preserve folk art forever, coexisting with scientific and technological progress.
